ABSTRACT

This Users Manual is the supporting documentation for the Public Use Data File from the National Longitudinal Study of the High School Class of 1972 (NLS). The data file contains certain merged data from the base year (1972), and first, second, and third follow-up NLS surveys for 22,652 cases. This volume contains only appendices K through Q, as follows: (K) Frequency Distributions for Base Year, First, Second, and Third Follow-up Questionnaire Data; (L) Subject Keyword Index; (M) Variable List with Tape Locations; (N) Specification and Use of Planning and Activity State Variables; (O) Composite Score Analysis: Ability Index, Socioeconomic Status Index, Some Psychological and Educational Construct Scales; (P) Bibliography of Papers Relating to Estimation of Variances of Survey Data and Examples of Estimation in NLS Analysis; and (Q) Alphabetic Responses for Third Follow-Up Questions. (Appendices A through J are contained in TM 007 563). (Author/CTM)

Appendix K

Frequency Distributions for Base-Year, First, Second, and Third Follow-Up Questionnaire Data

Frequency Distributions for Base-Year, First Follow-Up, Second Follow-Up, and Third Follow-Up Questionnaire Items

This appendix presents a complete and detailed listing of the variables and variable frequency distributions in the data file. For each variable in the file, the variable number, a short variable label, the tape location, a longer variable title, and a completely labeled frequency distribution (for all categorical codes that occur for that variable) are presented. For several items individual code tabulations would not be appropriate; in these cases group frequencies are reported, or only the frequency of data within the minimum to maximum range of the item and the error codes for the item are given. The fields that contain alpha-numeric information are documented as such in the frequency distributions.

As an aid in interpreting the labeling and coding methods used in these frequency distributions, consider the following hypothetical item response diagram:

0,1,2	8	Datum $\begin{pmatrix} +20, \\ +40, \\ +60 \end{pmatrix}$

The outermost digit in this response diagram indicates the level of routing consistency. A "0" denotes consistency; a "1," inconsistency; or a "2," multiple inconsistencies with the routing item or items external to it. For all variables, any value label containing an asterisk (*) denotes external routing inconsistency.

Within the datum for routing items, there may possibly exist codes to which have been added either 20, 40, or 60, indicating a violation of the logic of the skip pattern. A value label containing "X," "XX," or "XXX" denotes the addition of 20, 40, or 60, respectively.

For those manually edited items with initial multiple responses, a prefix of "8" has been added to the response. This digit, which indicates editing, precedes the datum.

For some variables, response values were collapsed for presentation purposes due to the large number of possible responses. This collapsing is indicated in frequency distributions by category labels specifying defined ranges. Consider the two sample tables presented below.

In Sample Table K.1, individual code tabulations are reported. The values in the "CODE" column actually exist on the data file. The category labels for these values correspond to the item response descriptions for third follow-up question 4 (TQ4).

In other cases, where data have been collapsed for reporting, the value in the "CODE" column is arbitrary and has been deleted. Sample Table K.2 illustrates the collapsing procedure. Group frequencies are reported for the ranges indicated by the category labels. It must be noted that no values are presented in the "CODE" column. This is the result of temporarily collapsing the ranges for printing, and the full range of values may be present on the data file. The distribution presented in Table K.2 indicates that the possible range of values is 0 to 2999998. Reference to the questionnaire item being summarized will aid in definition of what exact values can be expected in the data file for continuous variables.

In this appendix, the tabulations of the variables are listed in the order that the variables appear in the data file.

Specification and Use of Planning and Activity State Variables[1]

[1] The design and specification of the activity states were prepared by Samuel Peng, George Dunteman, and Mary Margaret Holt; this documentation is taken from their original specifications.

Specification and Use of Planning and Activity State Variables

I. INTRODUCTION

One planning state variable and 16 activity state variables are included for the base-year and first follow-up data. The activity states for 1972 and 1973 have been updated with information gleaned from the activity state survey that took place concurrently with second follow-up operations. Eight activity states have been developed for 1974 using information from the Second Follow-Up Questionnaire. An additional 16 activity states are defined for 1975 and 1976 using information from the Third Follow-Up Questionnaire. These variables are specially created for facilitating any analysis involving postsecondary activity status. Most of these variables are created by pooling information together from various items. The specific procedures are described in the following sections. Also described in this appendix are procedures used to impute or resolve missing data, and methods for using the planning and activity state variables to generate activity-state classifications.

While this document provides sufficient information to use the planning and activity state variables, one caution on their use is required. Most activity state variables should not be used independently in estimating proportions. For example, if one is interested in knowing the proportion of students in various types of postsecondary education in October 1972, one should use the variable ACT272 (what school?) and cross it by the variable ACT172 (study?) to get conditional proportions. The design and definition of the activity states are such that they provide great flexibility. The price of this flexibility is that the states must be combined to provide specific categories of status.

II. SPECIFICATION OF PLANNING AND ACTIVITY STATE VARIABLES

Because of the complex skip patterns in the First Follow-Up Questionnaire, some activity state variables were recoded to reflect the conditional nature of the item responses. Some imputations were carried out during the recoding process while other imputations were carried out subsequent to the recoding phase. The variable list and recoding process are presented below.

III. MISSING DATA RESOLUTION

As expected, some NLS participants failed to respond to certain variables used to define planning and activity states. The problem of missing data is usually resolved by special procedures such as imputation, statistical adjustment, and further data collection. While some procedures for imputing missing data for activity state variables were incorporated in the steps of defining and recoding variables as specified in the preceding section, two further phases of imputation procedures were implemented. The first phase involved direct logical inferences (e.g., types of school from name and address of school); and the second phase involved indirect logical inferences (e.g., impute studying full-time for those whose study time is unknown but who are studying and not working). The imputation procedures are described below.

III.1 Direct Logical Inferences

A. Type of school (October 1972 and 1973)

1. The name and address of school were listed for those respondents who were in school but did not indicate type of school or indicated "other" type of school for either October 1972 or October 1973. There were 1,034 such cases for October 1972 and/or October 1973.
2. The respondents on this list were classified in regard to type of school, and "others" were reclassified if necessary.

B. Study status (October 1972)

1. The date of entering postsecondary institution was listed for those respondents who failed to indicate whether they were in school in October 1972.
2. The respondents on this list were classified in regard to study status in October 1972. There were only four such cases.

III.2 Indirect Logical Inferences

A. Work full-time versus work part-time (October 1973 and/or October 1973)

1. The occupation code and weekly income were listed for working respondents who did not indicate hours worked per week for either October 1972 or October 1973.
2. Frequency distributions involving 13 income categories were run separately for part-time and full-time working respondents for October 1972. The procedure was repeated for October 1973. These runs were needed to devise decision rules for allocating respondents to full- versus part-time work on the basis of income.
3. The listed respondents were appropriately allocated to full- or part-time work for the October(s) in question on the basis of the relative likelihood of this income being generated from full- or part-time work.
4. There were 177 cases to resolve for October 1972 and 107 for October 1973.
5. For both October 1972 and 1973, working full-time was imputed for those respondents who specified not studying and specified working (but not full- or part-time). There were 670 such respondents for October 1972 and 689 for October 1973. Based upon data from the classifiables, this rule yielded a probability of .84 for correctly classifying a respondent in respect to full- versus part-time work.

B. Study full-time versus study part-time (October 1972 and 1973)

1. For both October 1972 and October 1973, studying full-time was imputed for those respondents who specified study (but not full- or part-time) and specified not working. This rule involved 348 respondents for October 1972 and 342 for October 1973. Based upon data from classifiables, this rule resulted in a probability of .98 for correctly classifying a respondent in respect to full- versus part-time study.

2. For both October 1972 and October 1973, studying full-time was imputed for those respondents who specified study (but not full- or part-time) and specified working part-time. This rule involved 41 respondents for October 1972 and 94 for October 1973. Based upon data from classifiables, this rule resulted in a probability of .94 for correctly classifying a respondent in respect to full- versus part-time study.

C. Study Status - October 1974 (ACT174)

In certain cases, where information was absent or contradictory, imputations were made. If

(a) SQ.10 = 98 and (SQ.9 = 98 or SQ.9 = 2)
(b) SQ.10 = 2 and (SQ.9 = 1),

then second follow-up questions 1B, 1C, 11, 12, 14, 15, 16, and 17 were examined to attempt to determine ACT174 status. In this process 45 cases were imputed.

D. Type of School - October 1974 (ACT274)

In a similar fashion as with ACT174 imputations were made for type of school. If SQ.2 had a response of 2 and SQ.12 had a response of 5, 6, 7, 96, or 98, then second follow-up questions 1B, 1C, and 11 were examined for evidence of type of school. In this process 123 imputations were made.

E. Full-Time or Part-Time Study Status - October 1974 (ACT374)

Again, where answers to the basic questions for this activity state were ambiguous or missing, supporting evidence was sought from other second follow-up items. If the response to SQ.10 was 2 and the response to SQ.16 was 3, 96, 97, or 98, then SQ.17 was examined. If more than 12 hours of class time was reported on SQ.17, then full-time study was imputed. If less than 12 hours was reported, then part-time study was imputed. In all, 102 items were imputed.

F. Work Status (ACT474) and Part-Time/Full-Time Work (ACT574) - October 1974

If the response of SQ.75 was 94, 96, 97, or 98 and the response to SQ.74 was 2, 94, 97, or 98, then second follow-up questions 76, 77, and 78 were examined to attempt to ascertain work status and full-time/part-time status (≥35 hours per week was considered full-time (Q.77)). In this process 44 cases were imputed.

III.3. Number of Cases with Missing Data

After the preceding imputation process, there were still some cases with missing data. The extent of missing data is summarized in Table N.2. No attempt was made to impute variables such as homemaker, looking for work, and military service. The major reasons for not conducting any further imputation in these three areas were that only a relatively small number of sample members were in these categories, and no reasonable imputation rules could be defined to impute values for these variables.

NUMBER OF MISSING CASES

Sample N = 21,350 FFU Respondents
20,872 SFU Respondents

	1972	1973	1974
Study Status (ACT1)	59	2	0
School--Type (ACT2)	131	47	33
School--Time (ACT3)	65	260	48
Work Status (ACT4)	32	20	0
Work--Time (ACT5)	91	129	5

IV. SUGGESTED ANALYSIS APPROACH AND VECTOR CLASSIFICATION SCHEME

Plans in the spring of 1972 are mutually exclusive categories, and they are indicated by ten codes. This planning variable is a fixed variable that provides no flexibility in definition except for grouping the ten categories into broader categories such as study, work, and other. The activity variables are, however, rather flexible. Different combinations of codes from several variables can generate different activity states. For example, if a researcher wants to identify a group of individuals who were studying full-time in a four-year college in October 1972, he simply needs to get the following combination of codes from the appropriate variables (A is study status, B is type of school, C is amount of study time for October 1972 as defined in Section II).

Variable	A	B	C	D	E	F	G	H

In a sense, activity state classification is a recoding procedure that uses relevant activity variables. This recoding may be accomplished for some computer programs by using logical statements. For example, using the SPSS program, the above activity state (i.e., studying full-time in a four-year college) may be generated by the following variable transformation statement: If (A EQ 1 AND B EQ 3 AND C EQ 1), VAR 1 = 1.

It is easily seen that such a recoding process is cumbersome. A long list of "If" statements is needed if a dozen different activity states need to be defined. A researcher may develop a program in which the input setup is simplified through the use of vectors or matrices of codes. A program flowchart is suggested in Figure N.1 on the following page. This type of input scheme is flexible, since it allows the definition and examination of different classification schemes with little change in the input setup. This type of input setup is illustrated with the following two examples of different activity state classification schemes. A vector of certain numbers can be used to define any one particular activity state, and a matrix of numbers can be used to define a complete set of activity states such as those shown in Tables N.3 and N.4.

With the input vectors as shown in the tables, the program will assign each member into one of the newly defined categories. To change any one activity state definition, one simply needs to change one of the row vectors. For example, if a researcher is interested in study and work states in October 1972 regardless of the type of school and part-time versus full-time status, he may simply specify these two groups with the following two-row vectors.

0	0	0	1	0	0	0	0

It should also be noted that such a scheme allows mutually exclusive activity state categories as well as nonmutually exclusive ones. For example, the study only and the work only groups as specified in Table N.3 are mutually exclusive groups, whereas the study and the work groups in the example above are not.

Composite Score Analysis:
Ability Index, SES Index, Some Psychological and Educational Construct Scales

(Edited from an original paper by

Composite Score Analysis:
Ability Index, SES Index, Some Psychological and Educational Construct Scales

The first set of analyses of the National Longitudinal Study (NLS) data was performed to derive some composite scores to be used in subsequent analyses. These composites include a general ability measure, a socio-economic status (SES) index, and factor scores resulting from factor analyses on sets of items measuring goals, attitudes, and other psychological attributes. The derivation of these composites are fundamental for the following reasons:

1) Variables such as ability and SES are critical for many of the proposed descriptive and analytical studies. These variables have been shown by a plethora of previous research to be consistently related to both academic and nonacademic outcomes such as college performance and occupational status. Consequently, they will be used to help define subpopulations for descriptive statistics and as independent or control variables in some of the analytical studies. Composite variables measuring goals, attitudes, etc., should also be useful in the analytical modeling of the educational and work behavior of young adults.
2) In most cases, a score derived from several items measuring various aspects of a construct is a more accurate measure than the score from a single item. A good SES index, for example, should be derived from items reflecting the many salient aspects of SES characteristics. Similarly, conceptually appealing factors from several items measuring psychological attributes are preferred to single item indicators. In addition, the rules of parsimony and data manageability also require some reduction of data dimensions, especially when the data are amenable to such reduction as in the present situation.

Several analyses were thus performed to achieve the above objectives. Procedures and results of the analyses are presented in the following three sections. Only those variables contained in the data base are described here. A more complete description of all composite analyses is covered in G. H. Dunteman, S. S. Peng, and M. M. Holt, "Composite Score Analysis: Ability Index, SES Index, Some Psychological and Educational Construct Scales." These sections concern the development of composites for (1) ability, (2) SES index, and (3) measures of psychological constructs.

A. Ability

There are six subtests in the base-year aptitude battery. They are Vocabulary, Picture Number, Reading, Letter Groups, Mathematics, and Mosaic Comparisons. Although a number of composites of ability useful for different purposes could be derived, the most important ability composite would be a linear combination of these subtests that would reflect general academic aptitude or general ability.

Principal components analysis of the six subtests and a principal factor analysis with a varimax rotation of the six subtests suggest that a linear combination of four subtests--reading, letter groups, vocabulary, and mathematics--with unit weights would be satisfactory for generating an overall academic measure (see Table 0.1). There was only one latent root greater than one. This root was associated with a principal component that accounted for 56 percent of the total variance. As indicated in Table 0.1, the first (largest) principal component with the exception of Mosaic Comparisons and Picture Number gave essentially equal weight to the remaining four subtests. Likewise, the rotated factor that explained the most common variance gave essentially the same result. For other subsidiary analyses it may be desirable to construct other composites, but for the major analyses an equally weighted linear combination of the four subtests should suffice.

From the above considerations, it was thus decided that a simple sum over the four subtests would be a sufficient general ability index. These four test scores were standard scores with a mean of 50, and a standard deviation of 10. The sum of the four subtests should have a mean approximately equal to 200. Because the adjusted base-year Student Questionnaire weights instead of the Test Battery weights were applied to computation, the observed mean of the composites was 203.6479. The standard deviation was 32.7434.

FACTOR LOADINGS ON SIX SUBTESTS

Test	Loadings
	First Principal Component	First Varimax Factor
Vocabulary	.75	.87
Picture Number	.62	.23
Reading	.83	.86
Letter	.82	.59
Math	.84	.80
Mosaic Comparison	.60	.13

To help define subpopulations for descriptive statistics, the ability composite distribution was categorized into high, middle, and low ability groups. The high ability group corresponded roughly to the upper quartile, the low ability group to the lower quartile, and the middle ability group to the two middle quartiles. The assumption and procedures used to find the cutting points for the groups are described below. It was assumed that population ability scores were distributed normally. According to the unit normal distribution, the proportion of scores having a z-score greater than .675 is approximately 25 percent. Likewise, the proportion of scores having a z-score less than -.675 is also about 25 percent. Translating this to the mean and standard deviation of the composite scores, any score greater than 225.7497 would be in the upper quartile range, and any score less than 181.5461 would be in the lower quartile range. The remaining scores are in the middle two quartiles. A student was then given a code of 3, 2, or 1 depending on whether his composite score was in the upper, middle, or lower quartile range.

Perhaps it should be reiterated that the ability composite mean and standard deviation were weighted. They can be considered as population parameters. Using these parameters to classify sample students, the proportion of students in the upper or lower quartile may be somewhat greater or smaller than 25 percent of the total sample. This was the case in the analysis, especially for the lower quartile range because low SES students who generally average lower in aptitude were oversampled. Students in the lower quartile category thus comprised more than 25 percent of the total sample students, and students in the upper quartile comprised less than 25 percent of the total sample. In other words, the weighted distribution is fairly symmetrical while the unweighted sample distribution is skewed toward the left.

B. SES Index

SES has been a critical independent variable in many previous longitudinal studies. In the One-Year Follow-Up Studies (1966) dealing with the effects of socioeconomic status on post-high-school education, Project Talent used a linear composite of father's education, mother's education, father's occupation, family income, value of home, plus several household items. The nine items making up the composite were selected from a group of 25 status-related variables which were analyzed for the expressed purpose of identifying items highly correlated with Project Talent's ability tests. The SES composite subsequently was divided into quartiles for tabular presentations. It is felt that a socioeconomic status index should be developed as much on conceptual as on empirical grounds.

The authors of the Coleman Report (1966) used a large cluster of "family background" variables in their analysis of student achievement. In addition to socioeconomic indicators, they included measures of urbanism, migration status, family size, and the expressed interests of the parents in their child's education. The cluster consequently aggregated measures of the home and community environment which do not conceptually belong in a family status index.

Since the appearance of these two reports (although in no way a consequence of them), there has been an unprecedented growth in sociology, both methodologically and conceptually, regarding knowledge of the effects of socioeconomic status on the occupational attainment process. This work essentially began with Blau and Duncan's landmark publication on the American Occupational Structure (1967) and has been followed by the work of Sewell and his associates. It is currently being continued in a series of analyses by Alexander and Eckland.

Two different approaches for dealing with socioeconomic status background were considered for the NLS data analysis. First, in the descriptive analyses, a composite index of socioeconomic status conceptually uncontaminated with other measures such as urbanism and migration was utilized for classifying respondents. This seemed to be desirable since the effects of status background on occupational and educational attainment would not be inflated by including conceptually distinct variables, and conversely the effects would not be underestimated by relying on a single indicator of SES such as father's education.

The second approach used in some of the analytical studies involved keeping the indicators or components of an SES composite as separate entities since these indicators probably interact with one another and have differential effects for different subpopulations and different outcome variables. Some of the regression or path models would need to retain the clarity and separateness of the various SES indicators. Regression analysis allows much more freedom in the use of multiple indices than does cross-tabulation, and this advantage was exploited.

The SES index considered for descriptive analysis was derived from an equally weighted linear composite of father's education, mother's education, father's occupation, family income, and the household items from the first follow-up and/or base-year student questionnaire. The entire set of procedures are summarized in the flow chart on the following page. Specific procedures are further explicated in the following paragraphs.

1) Father's and mother's education level from first follow-up (FFU) question 78 and base-year question 90 were rescaled as indicated on pages 0.7–0.8. This rescaling process makes the two sets of information from the base-year (Q.90) and the first follow-up (Q.78) surveys compatible. The responses to follow-up Q.78 were checked first and used if available; if information was missing, base-year Q.90 was then used. If education level was missing on both questions, then, of course, the education component of the SES index would be missing.*

* Results from Activity State Questionnaire (ASQ) item 14 were substituted when education level was missing for both first follow-up question 78 and base-year question 90 and was available in the ASQ.

2) Parent's income was rescaled as shown on page 0.10. The rescaling process resulted in a new scale that was approximately interval in nature. That is, the means for each category would be approximately equally spaced from each other. The information was drawn from base-year Q.93 first. If the information was missing, then the responses to follow-up Q.93 were used.

3) Census Bureau codes for father's occupation from first follow-up Q.79 were mapped into Duncan SEI scores (see Appendix 0.1). If information was missing, then the responses to base-year Q.25 were used.* A special mapping into SEI scores was derived (see Table 0.2). The SEI score for each occupational category is the average of SEI scores for representative occupations listed under each category.

4) A household item composite score from base-year Q.94 or first follow-up Q.94 was computed. Results of a factor analysis (in Table 0.3) showed that all the variables had almost equal weights. The procedures were as follows: (1) standardize item 94b through 94k using the weighted means and standard deviations (see Table 0.3); (2) reverse the sign of the item standard scores so that high scores would reflect possession of the household item in question; (3) treat those with less than four out of ten responses as cases with missing data; (4) sum the standard scores over non-missing items; and (5) divide the sum by the number of non-missing items. The decision to use the simple average of the standard scores is based on the results of the principal component analysis. The use of the average rather than the sum was to alleviate the problem of missing information. Study place was dropped from the composite because it had a low correlation with the first principal component and also had an ambiguous interpretation.

5) Subgroup means were computed on the above five SES components. The subgroups were defined by cross-classifying race, high school program, and aptitude. The means were computed for each classification factor separately and for all two-way (e.g., race x aptitude) and three-way classifications. These means are included in Appendix 0.2. In general, the number of subjects used in the computations is large enough to provide stable estimates. In many cases, the number is greater than 1,000. Those estimates with less than 300 cases are indicated in the Appendix.

6) The subgroup means were substituted for the missing SES data. If values on more than three of the five variables for any single case were missing, then no SES composite was computed. The selection of a proper mean for substitution was determined by the availability of the three stratified variables. If a respondent had the three variables, then three-way classification means were used for substitutions. If a respondent had only two of the three variables, the corresponding two-way classification means were used. For other cases, the corresponding primary group means were used for substitutions of the missing data.

7) A factor analysis was performed on the five variables to determine if one factor could reasonably account for the intercorrelations of the five SES components. Results reveal a single factor solution with homogeneous weights to the five components.

8) The five variables were standardized and summed over the non-missing components. The sums were then divided by the number of non-missing components. The resultant scores were classified into upper, middle two, and lower quartiles, and each student was coded with a 3, 2, or 1 accordingly.

C. Measures of Some Psychological and Other Attributes

Included in the base-year questionnaire are sets of items measuring some psychological attributes and other constructs. A number of completed factor analyses on these sets of items yielded several conceptually appealing factors. Five composite variables were derived on the basis of the factor analyses summarized in Appendix 0.3. These composites with their components are listed in Table 0.4.

COMPOSITE NAMES AND CONSTITUENT ITEMS

Composites	Constituent Items from Base-Year Questionnaire	Attributes Measured
1. Work	Q.20--a,c,e	Goal orientations
2. Community	Q.20--f,g,j
3. Family	Q.20--b,h,i
4. Self-Concept	Q.21--a,c,d,h	Self-concept and locus of control
5. Control of Environment	Q.21--b,e,f,g

The responses of the items used for the composites were scored in the following fashion:

Question	Scoring	Descriptions
Q.20	1 → 3	Not important → Very important
Q.21	1 → 5	Strongly agree → Strongly disagree

The five composite scales--work, community, family, self-concept, and control of environment--were each computed as the average of the items listed in Table 0.4. With the exception of family orientation, all subitems were averaged with positive unit weights. In the computation of family orientation, subitem I has a negative unit weight (i.e., family orientation = B + H - I). If one of the subitems was missing, then the available subitems were averaged.

For each factor a linear composite score was computed to approximate the factor. The procedures were as follows: (1) each item defining a factor was standardized using the weighted mean and weighted standard deviation (see Appendix 0.4); (2) non-missing standardized items that defined a factor were summed; and (3) the sum was divided by the number of non-missing items. The resultant value was a composite score.

Weighted means and standard deviations were computed for each composite for each subgroup defined separately by sex, race, ability, high school program, and father's occupation. Table 0.5 presents indications (+ sign) for those scale scores that differentiate subgroups within each of the five classification variables by at least .10. The standard deviation of all five composites was between .50 and .90. No statistical tests were conducted because small differences would be significant due to the large number of degrees of freedom, since the sample size is about 17,700.

COEFFICIENT ALPHA AND RELATIONSHIPS BETWEEN FIVE COMPOSITE SCORES AND FIVE CLASSIFICATION VARIABLES

Composites	Groups
	Sex	Race	High School Program	Ability	Father's Occupation	Coefficient Alpha
1. Work	+	+	+	+	+	.53
2. Community		+		+	+	.44
3. Family					+	.30
4. Self-Concept		+	+	+	+	.66
5. Control of Environment	+	+	+	+	+	.56

From Table 0.5, it is seen that there are group differences on most of the scales. Only family orientation (3) seems to yield virtually no difference among groups.

Internal consistency reliability estimates were also computed for each scale and presented in Table 0.5. Cronbach's coefficient alpha formula was used. The coefficient alpha's ranged from .30 to .66 with three of the five values ranging from .53 to .66. Scales that had a coefficient alpha less than .50 were community orientation (2) and family orientation (3). In general, the reliabilities were satisfactory, especially when the brevity of the scales is considered.

Intercorrelations among the five factor scores were computed and are presented in Table 0.6. Because of the large number of degrees of freedom (about 16,000), any correlation coefficient greater than .02 or .03 is statistically significant.

[a] Otis Dudley Duncan's socioeconomic status metric described in A. J. Reiss and Others, Occupations and Social Status, New York: Free Press of Glencoe, 1961.

[b] Paul M. Siegel's NORC prestige update is described in a 1970 University of Chicago unpublished Ph.D. dissertation, Table 5, Prestige in the American Occupational Structure.

[c] Donald J. Treiman's prestige scores were recalculated from an unpublished source in which score equivalents were given to the International Labor Organization classification of occupations. Professor Treiman kindly made these available to me with the understanding that any use of these data be made only with prior permission from himself. They should not be cited without his consent, and he in no way is responsible for errors I may have introduced in rendering the ILO classification equivalent to the one used by the U.S. Census.

[d] Siegel and Treiman scores for males were not computed for this occupation title, lacking information in Technical Paper #26 on the male composition of this 1970 category.

[e] Technical Paper #26 omitted compositional information on this title; scores were assigned on arbitrary basis of similarity to another title having requisite data.

Principal Components and Factor Analysis

Goal Orientations (Q.20 - ten items)

There were three latent roots greater than one. The three-factor varimax solution was

		Orientation
	1 Work	2 Community	3 Family
1. Success in work	.62	.13	.13
2. Marriage and family	.23	.15	.55
3. Money	.73	-.04	-.09
4. Friendship	.10	.34	.22
5. Steady work	.69	.12	.19
6. Leader	.31	.60	.03
7. Give children opportunities	.34	.43	.33
8. Living Close to Home	.08	.25	.53
9. Getting Away	.12	.26	-.74
10. Correcting Inequities	-.22	.81	-.09
Σ_{ai}^2	1.7373	1.5029	1.3648

The three-factor solution makes sense from a conceptual viewpoint.

Self-Concept and Control of Environment Items Factored Jointly (Q.21)

A two-factor varimax solution summarized the data nicely. One factor had high loading from the four self-concept items and the other factor had high loadings from the four control of environment items. Each set of four items was previously factor analyzed, and each set turned out to be essentially unidimensional. The joint factor analysis confirmed the fact that the items within each scale have higher intercorrelations than items between scales. The two-factor varimax solution is presented below.

	I Self-Concept	II Control of Environment
1. Positive attitude	.73	-.09
2. Luck more important than work	.08	.60
3. Equal worth	.72	-.13
4. Able to do as well as most people	.69	-.05
5. Can't get ahead	-.22	.65
6. Shouldn't plan	-.14	.73
7. Accept condition	.04	.62
8. Satisfied	.65	.08
Σ_{ai}^2	2.02	1.75

High scores on Factor I reflect a negative self-concept while high scores on Factor II reflect a postive level of Control of Environment.
